

HISTORY

My Daddy Taught Me Better, Incorporated (MDTMB) was established on April 5, 2022 after many years of contemplation by Founder, Sean P.

Kendrick, Sr. It was founded as an organization that not only provides support and guidance to students, families, and communities, but is also a source of positive representation and guidance from fellow fathers, leaders, and stakeholders in said communities. Women have long been the driving force for social service provision and many educational, mentoring, and philanthropic efforts. As we work together, we have the opportunity to fortify communities, holistically.

From its inception, MDTMB's Board of Directors and volunteers have been able to accomplish the following for 250 families in need:

- Provide hygiene kits
- Provide school supplies
- Provide summer food baskets
- Provide holiday food baskets
- Provide school clothing and shoes for families

While most of our efforts have been focused on serving children and families in partnership with SLAM! Atlanta Charter School, we envision operating at full capacity as a community hub that offers a breadth of critical educational, advocacy, social, and mental health services. We have spent time learning more about the ways we can make a difference in the community, ironing out our structure, building our resources, and cultivating partnerships with stakeholders that will walk alongside us to realize our mission, vision, and programmatic goals and objectives.

We are beyond excited to serve the community and expand our capacity.

We hope that you connect with us to witness as we engage in "Changing The Trajectory"!
